Measures taken to prevent the destruction of unsold consumer products						During FY25, Inter IKEA continued to implement measures aimed at preventing unsold consumer products from becoming waste and supporting their continued use. Examples of these measures include repair and refurbishment activities, repackaging and return-to-stock processes, or donating to external organisations. Inter IKEA does not currently possess sufficiently granular and traceable data to consistently and completely identify and verify the final waste treatment operation applied to each discarded product. As a result, product-level reporting on specific waste treatment outcomes is currently limited to cases where such information can be reliably substantiated. The absence of reported figures relating to resale, repair, refurbishment or donation should not be interpreted as the absence of such activities, but a reflection of the current limitations in the availability and traceability of data within the reporting scope.
Measures taken to prevent destruction of unsold consumer products						Inter IKEA is evaluating opportunities to strengthen and expand measures intended to prevent the destruction of unsold consumer products, such as facilitating the increase of product resale, repair and refurbishment activities, repackaging and return-to-stock processes, donation programmes, and/or initiatives that support product longevity through improved reparability. In parallel, Inter IKEA may explore options for enhancing its data collection, traceability and reporting capabilities which could improve transparency regarding the destination of unsold consumer products and the measures implemented to prevent their destruction. As reporting under Article 24 is conducted at product level, rather than material level, it may not always be possible to attribute a single waste treatment operation to an entire product in a consistent, reliable and verifiable manner as many products consist of multiple materials and components that may be separated and directed to different waste treatment operations, including preparation for re-use, resale, recycling, energy recovery, disposal, etc.
